

1-MAN FILIBUSTER HOLDS UP TARIFF

McClintic of Oklahoma Delays House Consideration of Measure

A DEMOCRATIC SPLIT

Governor of Texas Assailed by Oklahoman Who Lost Place on Aggie Committee

Spoke to world.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The debate over the tariff bill and its regulation was further widened in the house today as Representative McClintic of Oklahoma set up the first successful one-man filibuster maintained in the house this session.

McClintic was taken to task by Massachusetts' Walsh, of Massachusetts who declared that McClintic was holding up the business of the house because of personal animosity. Representative Gardner, of Texas, who kept McClintic at his seat, however, replied that he was trying to make the house attend to members extending their remarks to the record and that one senator had voted sufficiently to make it possible for taxpayers a printing bill in 1920.

During the day McClintic attempted to get time to attack Gardner's stand on the tariff bill. The Texas representative made a speech yesterday in favor of "sufficiently" to make McClintic instead have been ready for a protective tariff and to "calmly" to hold his place in the democratic organization.

McClintic made frequent points of oration and caused roll calls to divide attention. Members of both sides admitted that under the rules of the house McClintic could tie up business if he maintained his filibuster.

Gardner is said to have promised McClintic the place on the house agricultural committee made vacant by the transfer of Representative Deacon from the senate to the house. After McClintic had resigned all other committee assignments that the democratic caucus announced that the agriculture committee vacancy would not be filled until after March 4.

Swindall said such an amendment was necessary to assure the payment by the Osages of the gross production tax.

ignition of the entire French cabinet.

Late in the afternoon the alternative proposition was submitted to the French delegates, providing for fixed annuities for 42 years plus varying annuities figured on Germany's foreign trade. This plan was rejected to give way to the French proposal that owing to the impossibility of knowing now what Germany's situation will be in the future, no part of France's claim should be abandoned. Under this plan, the French and other creditors of Germany would be paid a minimum consisting of fixed annuities and an additional sum proportionate to the economic prosperity of Germany.

charges are expected to appear against Joe Fleming. His simple defense is that disqualification should also enable his accusers to send him to the penitentiary for life for what Joe has done to the drama of some great events of King.

It is desired to prevent corporations from transferring their profits into increased capital without paying an income tax. It is not popular for that reason that legislators from the larger communities are not in evidence. Pearson is from Hartman and Neumann from Beckham, where the large corporations exist are always broke and have so much concerned about the income as the outgo.

Would Disqualify Two More.

Senators Wallace and Fleming brought their insurgent crew waded up Wednesday, the former introducing a resolution to oust Deacon and the latter one to disqualify Clark Nichols from the senate. The former was successful.

McClintic, who was taken to task by Representative Walsh, of Massachusetts who declared that McClintic was holding up the business of the house because of personal animosity, introduced a joint bill to disqualify Nichols from the senate.

McClintic continued to object to members extending their remarks to the record and that one senator had voted sufficiently to make it possible for taxpayers a printing bill in 1920.

During the day McClintic attempted to get time to attack Gardner's stand on the tariff bill. The Texas representative made a speech yesterday in favor of "sufficiently" to make it possible for taxpayers a printing bill in 1920.

McClintic made frequent points of oration and caused roll calls to divide attention. Members of both sides admitted that under the rules of the house McClintic could tie up business if he maintained his filibuster.

Gardner is said to have promised McClintic the place on the house agricultural committee made vacant by the transfer of Representative Deacon from the senate to the house. After McClintic had resigned all other committee assignments that the democratic caucus announced that the agriculture committee vacancy would not be filled until after March 4.
